Calvary Baptist Golden Jubilee Observance Comes to Close With Four Services

(From Page One)

Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever. There was special choir music and a duet, "Visperings of Jesus," sung by Mrs. Hamlin and Miss Mary Hamlin; another duet, "Gave My Life for Thee," by Miss Elaine Haglund and Miss Inez Shelton.

The first gathering of the day was the Sunday school session, with Clarence Swanson in charge. The Misses Jean and Ruth Danielson sang "Sweeter As the Years Go By," donors of memorial books were read and Stanley Rendahl spoke on "What Is a Christian?" Telegrams were read from Mrs. Charles P. Williamson and Mrs. Audley P. Blake, of Rochester, N. Y., and Miss Virginia Backstrom, of Youngstown, O. There were also messages from Mr. Hamlin's brother, Rev. F. C. Hamlin, and the Riverview Baptist church at McKeesport and from the church at Kulm, N. D. Additional memorial flowers were to honor Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Backstrom, Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Bosin, from Mrs. Ruth Johnson, Helmer and Verner Backstrom; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bjers, from their nine children.

In the afternoon, the choir sang and the pastor read a brief historical sketch, followed by greetings, and a sermon by Rev. Larson on "The Sure Foundation of the Church," Matthew 16:18, one of the passages read by Rev. Olof Lindh at the organization of the church on December 23, 1890. The closing prayer was followed by refreshments served by the Young People's Society.

Sunday evening's service opened with a song in unison, invocation, song by choir and sermon by Rev. Rendahl on Mark 2:1-5, "Jesus has come, the all sufficient one." There followed farewells by the Larsons and the Rendahls and Rev. Hamlin pronounced the benediction.

The outstanding social event of the five-day celebration of the church's 50th anniversary was the jubilee banquet at the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening, when 150 were seated at tables beautifully arranged in gold and white and an elaborate program was carried out under the direction of Henry F. Blick, vice chairman of the parish and toastmaster for the event. There were greetings from many local persons and out of town visitors, interesting reminiscences of early days in the church, group singing, vocal solos by Miss Viola Lindmark and an impressive candlelighting service at the close. Because of the many taking part, details of this banquet program will be given tomorrow.

Greatest Exponent of Hypnotism and Mental Telepathy to Perform Here would have knocked the props out of the particular attractiveness of his program because of its unusual difficulty. To say that he came through is to put it mildly. We heartily recommend Dr. Polgar to please the most particular persons with his showmanship in the unusual program that he represents. Polgar will exhibit more extraordinary mental powers with his memory feats, besides his mental telepathy, and tops off his program by demonstrating the power of suggestion upon subjects chosen from the audience.

The program is all in fun and no one should fear embarrassment. His experiments in hypnosis have been called no less amazing than amusing. With the ease of an expert showman, he holds his audience in suspense and then plunges them into gales of laughter.

Tickets are on sale in many centrally located places for 75 cents. The program is all in fun and no one should fear embarrassment. WARREN COUNTY MAN BELIEVED TO BE SUICIDE

The discovery of a coat and cap belonging to John Morgoch, Warren county octogenarian, missing since November 20, has led local police to believe that the aged man may have been a suicide.

The cap and coat were found on the riverbank near the FN tower yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock by Roy Ryberg, 307 Park street. A note, written in Austrian, was in one of the pockets, and while translation has not yet been reported to the police department, a partial translation was that Morgoch intended to disappear "and will never be seen again."

The man, who resided on the Youngsville-Pittsfield road was last seen in this city when he alighted from a car operated by Carl Solberg, a neighbor. Solberg stated that Morgoch had asked for a ride to Warren and that he had last seen him at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Liberty street.

Plan Schedule For Radio Programs Over Christmas Holiday

BY C. E. BUTTERFIELD
Associated Press Radio Editor
(Time is Eastern Standard)

New York, Dec. 9.—Preparation for Christmas broadcasting is now in order by the networks. While the schedule is not at all complete, it is beginning to shape up.

An annual feature, lighting of the national community Christmas tree at Washington on Christmas Eve with President Roosevelt in attendance, will have an important place.

From overseas on Christmas morn is to come to England's "Christmas Under Fire," in which King George, children's carols, word from soldiers, aviators and sailors of the armed forces are to be heard in addition to pickups from bomb-scarred London. Also, evacuated children are to exchange messages with their parents.

Later in the day, greetings from the United States will be sent to England via NBC and the short waves by a group of radio, stage and screen stars who will perform from Hollywood, Chicago and New York.

Panels of glass were cast for the baths in Pompeii, but plate glass did not make its appearance as a rolled product until 1688 in France.

NEW CASTLE MAN SHOT TO DEATH; HUNTER IS HELD

Sheffield, Dec. 9.—The immediate section's first fatality of the current week-old deer season occurred Sunday with the death of Albert Klingensmith, 43, of 7707 North Miner street, New Castle, who died at three o'clock in the Kane Community hospital of wounds received about 9:30 Saturday morning while hunting in the woods near Cooper Tract, Forest county, 14 miles south of here.

The victim, admitted to the hospital about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, suffered a severe wound of the left chest, the shell fragment which caused it puncturing the left lung, and a lesser superficial wound on the right thigh.

Investigation by game officials of the shooting led to the arrest Sunday afternoon, at a hunting camp in Bluejay, a few miles from the shooting scene, of Raymond Gregory, 29, Midland avenue, Carnegie, who, when questioned by the officers, confessed having fired the fatal shot.

Gregory was taken to Tonesta and lodged in the Forest county jail to await arraignment before a justice today on a charge of "killing a human being in mistake for game."

Arresting officer in the case was Game Protector Carl Benson, of Tonesta, who conducted the investigation, together with Hayes T. Englebert, Oil City, field supervisor, and Robert S. Lichtenberger, game technician and protector who during the deer season has been making Sheffield his headquarters.

The story of the tragedy, as revealed by the investigation, was as follows:

Klingensmith and his 14-year-old son, Jack, left New Castle about 2 a. m. Saturday and drove to Cooper Tract to hunt. Arriving at their destination, they entered the woods and moved about for a couple of hours, finally stopping at the edge of a hemlock thicket to inspect a deer "bed." The father, a scoutmaster and a veteran woodsman, was explaining the "sign" to his son when suddenly a shot rang out and simultaneously the elder man slumped to the ground.

The son cried out for help and shortly two hunters arrived on the scene. They bandaged the injured man's wounds, made a stretcher out of their hunting coats, placed the wounded man, who was still conscious, on the stretcher and started to carry him out to the road.

Accompanied by the boy they came upon Paul Phillips, 20, of Cooper Tract, and his hunting companion, Carlyle Hoover, 28, of Yatesboro, Pa., Phillips and Hoover helped them to the home of his father, John Phillips, in Cooper Tract settlement, a half mile or so away.

The wounded man was taken to Kane in the Borden ambulance. The game officials were notified of the shooting when they returned to their headquarters Saturday night and started an investigation. Tracing the footsteps of the two hunters who arrived first on the scene, they found where a kneeling shot had been fired, and search in the snow brought to light a 30-06 shell. Moving into the thicket on a direct line toward the spot where Klingensmith fell, the officers found where a bullet had struck a hemlock, indicating that the impact had fragmented the pellet just before it hit the victim.

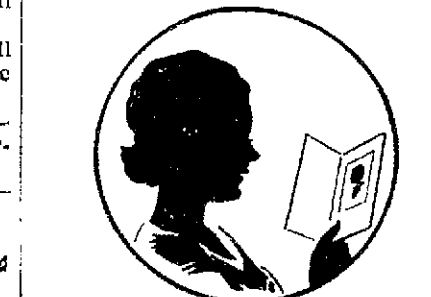

The officers learned from Paul Phillips that one of the stretcher-bearers had carried a gun of that calibre and had mentioned being in a camp near Bluejay. Phillips accompanied the officers and identified a man at a camp as being one of the stretcher-bearers and the one who carried the 30-06.

Gregory allegedly admitted he had fired the shot and signed a confession. His companion was Edward Hutchinson, of Pittsburgh, who professed he was ignorant of his companion's mistake. Klingensmith, a mail carrier by occupation, has been wounded about 25 years ago when he was shot in the neck by a .22 calibre bullet. His family was summoned from New Castle and was at the hospital when he passed away.

The laws of inherited characteristics were first stated by Gregor J. Mendel, an Austrian abbot, who died in 1884.

After a most successful tournament in St. Louis, we started our long drive home to New York. Our first stop was at Terre Haute, Ind., and there I had an interesting chat with Dr. E. J. Hunt, a member of the board of governors of the American Contract Bridge League.

Dr. Hunt told me about a hand he had played against a couple of easterners at a tournament some time ago. "I believe the boys thought we were going to be a little easy to handle," he said.

"My bid of two no trump without—but what can you do with this sort of hand? I won the opening lead with the queen of clubs. Now I could see that if I tackled the spades at once, the defense might switch to hearts in desperation and might cash four heart tricks. So I cashed the diamond ace as though preparing for a finesse against the queen, then led a small heart as though trying to get entry through the queen to continue diamonds.

"I hoped that this would give the impression that I was weak in spades, but well fixed in hearts. "East won the queen of hearts with the king and returned a club, which I won with the ace. Now I laid down the queen of spades, as though trying to knock out the ace and get entry through the king. West won at once and knocked out the king of clubs, but then it was curtains, as I cashed nine tricks."

War Breaks, Then Mends His Heart

For the 67-year-old Sultan of Johore, one of the world's richest men, the Battle of Britain has meant first a broken heart, then a mended one. First, the British show girl of whom he was enamored was killed in an air raid. But he met another lovely young lady, Marcella Mendel, 25-year-old Rumanian girl, when he bought a Red Cross flag from her. They're pictured above in London after their recent marriage.

THE ONLY Indispensable Profession on Earth

That is a broad statement to make, of course, but you will agree that it is just about literally true. All the professions are important to the progress of the world, but Medical Science has been, and is one of the most useful and necessary to mankind.

In no boastful sense is this statement made, but with all reverence for the Doctor's privilege of being the physical "keeper of his brother." The Doctor without that deep inner sense of what he owes his profession and his patients, is most decidedly the exception that proves the rule.

Humility in the knowledge that all the problems of human health have not been solved, walks with your Doctor. Also pride in the strides that have been, and are being made, in this Scientific profession, which is so indispensable to the health and happiness of the world.

From before the cradle and throughout life, the Doctor is your counsellor, friend, health guardian and sometimes lifesaver — get acquainted with your Doctor.

Chapter 38

About Food, And Things

"I MEAN," he added hastily, "I'm a restaurateur and places which advertise old time Southern cooking. Fried chicken, for instance. Either half raw inside or tough and tasteless, with a coat of cement on the outside. More crimes," he hesitated, as though he would like to bite back that word crime, then continued doggedly, "are committed in the name of fried chicken than any other one dish."

"But," Mr. Marshall pointed out with a pontifical gesture, "that is only because the real article is so superb. Imitation, you know, is the sincerest flattery."

"I'm so sorry there's only cold baked chicken today," I said. "With the police here, I had an idea we might be eating one at a time, in snatches."

"But, ah, this hot shrimp pie," Mr. Marshall rushed gallantly to the rescue. Then he turned to Kirk judiciously, obviously determined that no outsider should fail to be informed as to the true state of affairs. "Your point is well taken, young man. The traditional Southern cooking and hospitably flourishes an age of leisure. Today it survives only in a few fortunate homes, such as—"

"Page Bessie," said Eve sardonically.

Ignoring the implication of her remark, Mr. Marshall continued, "Of course, there are many reasons for this. I am minded of an apt passage in a book by one of my favorite authors, Thomas Love Peacock. A reverend gentleman, describing what he evidently considers the ideal woman, says, 'She has the greatest of all female virtues, for she superintends the household and looks after her husband's dinner.'"

"After all," asked Alice coyly, "what could be more important?"

Mr. Marshall beamed on her approvingly, while I tried not to meet the look of amused disdain in Eve's eyes. I knew it couldn't be very long before she would break out one way or another. And knowing, too, that Mr. Marshall could go on in this vein forever, giving both chapter and verse, I tried to divert the conversation into other channels. "I didn't know," I said, "that Thomas Love Peacock was one of your favorites."

Mr. Dodson turned his face toward me and smiled as Mr. Marshall replied, "He writes so appetizingly of food, my dear Sally. Yes, I greatly fear that where I once read for style and—other literary considerations, I now read for the food."

"The murder," Realizing how his witicism must sound under the circumstances, he grew quite red and apologized hastily. "I'm very sorry, Sally. I'm like the boy on the bicycle, who tried so hard to miss the tree that he ran smack into it."

"His distress was so genuine and the picture of Mr. Marshall on a bicycle trying to miss a tree was so provocative that we all laughed. 'I suppose no one ever thought of dining in those days,' Eve observed, with unexpected tact.

"Oh, no, they simply ate what they wanted and resigned themselves to 'gout,'" Mr. Marshall agreed.

"We've got the evidence in the library," said Bill, "a gouty stool designed by Mr. Sheraton himself so it can be raised to different elevations to support the ailing foot or leg. No home complete without one."

"Hold on to it, old boy," advised Kirk, with a grin in my direction. "You'll need it unless you divorce Sally."

"Not if he keeps up his golf," said Mr. Marshall, who is as serious about his game as he is about his food. I prayed he would not get started on that subject.

"The only thing I can't enjoy about books written such a long time ago," said Eve, reverting to Mr. Peacock, "is the smell."

"The smell," Mr. Marshall repeated, greatly mystified.

"Oh, don't you know?" Eve explained with characteristic airiness, "the lack of bathing facilities."

Mr. Marshall looked a little embarrassed, but Mr. Dodson smiled and said he had always thought that was how perfumes happened to be invented.

Lost Wire

BESSIE came in with the coffee and whispered in my ear that she couldn't find the piece of telephone wire. "I look on the floor and outside and all about, but it ain't nowhere."

"Well, look again when lunch is over," I told her, and wait a moment—Thomas has forgotten the cheese. Involuntarily I glanced at Mr. Dodson, wondering if with his preternatural trained hearing he had picked up the conversation about the telephone wire. But if so, his expression gave no indication, for he seemed to be listening, or he seemed to be off again.

Down the table, Bob was fidgeting with his food and eating practically nothing. I knew from that half-humorous, half-reckless look on Bob's face that Mr. Marshall's ponderous discourse was due to wreck itself shortly against a facetiousness which he might not understand. And I gadded myself mentally to jump into the breach. Bob had been drinking too much for a hostess to feel safe about him.

"Socking of commercial products," Mr. Marshall droned on, "many of these are quite excellent. But there are certain dishes that cannot be equalled. Take soup, always the test of good cooking. Where was there ever a canned soup to compare with that made at home with a good base of meat stock and so thick with vegetables that it is a meal in itself?"

"But," Bob broke in, "why all this heavy accent on food when it is drink which brings us our most transcendental moments?"

He looked up and down the table challengingly. "A mouse," he announced, in answer to his own question, and rising, stepped over to the sideboard and brought to the table a tray holding the decanter of brandy and glasses.

"Join me," he asked of the table at large.

"Why not?" Eve replied. "I don't suppose you've any corner on these transcendental moments."

The ringing of the telephone bell came faintly through the closed hall door and I felt myself relaxing with relief. Dr. Bates at last. But when Lindy came back after answering the call, she said it was Mr. Dunbar who was wanted.

Those of us who did not take brandy lingered over a unconsciously trying to postpone as long as possible the time when we must face Lieutenant Gregory and reality.

Bob came back from the telephone with a harassed look on his face and said that he really should go in to town to attend to a matter which had come up. "Could you arrange it for me?" he asked Mr. Marshall as casually as though he had not a few moments before stepped on that gentleman's toes. Mr. Marshall assured him rather stiffly that only Lieutenant Gregory could grant such permission.

"Why should you have to be going back to town?" Claire asked in a low voice, which nonetheless revealed an unexpected sharp note. "Didn't you come out to stay until Monday morning?"

But even more surprising than Claire's outburst was Alice's look of undisguised impatience turned on Bob. Evidently she was counting on the Harper money even more than it had occurred to anyone to think.

Exit Eve

WHAT crosscurrent of feminine influence could be calling Bob to town? I wondered. There were so many ladies who counted on Bob for so many things. How would he be able to arrange all that to fit in with matrimony? Quite plainly Claire was not going to like it, even though he might be just flitting from flower to flower.

I did not hear what he said to Claire in answer to her question, for Eve, rising to her feet and holding her brandy glass high, proposed a toast.

"To the bride," she said, with a little supercilious bow to Claire. Then, downing the contents of her glass, she asked, "Whatever made you think, Claire, that Bob would want to be taken seriously as a marrying man?"

We looked at her in shocked silence, and Alice said, "If you mean to be humorous, Eve, I don't think that is very funny."

"You wouldn't," said Eve, sweeping out of the room and looking back over her shoulder to say, "But take it any way you like."

I did not want to look at Claire, yet instinctively I had, and I saw cold fury gather in her eyes as she turned to watch Eve from the room. Then she looked around the table and smiled. Except for that glance, I should not have known how much the smile cost her, but I involuntarily applauded her self-control.

I had been tight about Eve. She had not been able to keep it up. She really hated us all. This and her natural lack of self-restraint had been too much for her.

"Suppose we go to the library," I suggested, and under cover of the general movement I asked Mr. Dodson almost under my breath, "What do you think of her?"

"I can see she would be a popular choice," he said non-committally.

"But could you—did you get any idea at all? It seems as though she were a—"

"Perhaps a glimmer," he cautiously admitted.

"Tell me," I begged.

"No, no," he said, "you must not press me like this. Too much is involved. We must not run the risk of a mistake, or of letting your sympathy block the path of justice. Besides, I have an idea that I wish to test. If that works—"

"Yes."

"No, no," he said, "you must not press me like this. Too much is involved. We must not run the risk of a mistake, or of letting your sympathy block the path of justice. Besides, I have an idea that I wish to test. If that works—"

"Yes."

Wide Hunt For Missing Broker

(From Page One)
Declaring he would stick by him, Mrs. Hazel Boltz asked her husband to surrender and face a federal indictment charging mail fraud and violation of the securities act and a Philadelphia county indictment charging him with operations of a brokerage office without a license.

Pennsylvania motor police had to send for additional help to handle the crowd that gathered for the auction. Automobiles had created a traffic snarl on the highway bordering the Boltz estate as early as 9 a. m.

Mrs. Boltz, who has remained in seclusion with her daughter at the 250-acre farm, has joint title to the property, which is not involved in the auction.

Navy Command Is Shaken Up By Mussolini days all at their "own request"—Il Duce lost two of his generals in an airplane crash in northern Italy Saturday.

One was General Aldo Pellegrini, 62, his chief of civil aviation, the other General Pietro Pintor, 60, head of the armistice commission dealing with vanquished France.

General Camillo Grossi, one of Italy's high ranking military leaders, was named to succeed Pintor as president of the Italian armistice commission.

Changes in the political ranks of Mussolini's Fascist government were expected in some circles to be in the offing to complete the current replacements of keymen.

Foreign quarters expressed belief that the overhauling of the Italian war machine was due as much to political as to military necessity.

With maintenance of the people's morale as essential as that of the fighting forces in times which are difficult militarily, economically and politically, Il Duce moved on three successive days to supplant his commanders with trusted lieutenants expected to carry out his orders vigorously and produce successes.

Democrats Are Facing Contest For Speakership

tonight's caucus with one of the two top spots in the house—either speaker or majority floor leader. Those working for Kilroy for speaker, quietly, use as an argument that Achterman would be valuable to the party as the floor champion of legislation—a spot he is accustomed to.

Sixty-four votes are needed to win, if all the 126 representatives attend.

The speakership is being vacated by Ellwood J. Turner, Republican, who presided over the house in the 1939 regular and 1940 special sessions.

Turner is slated to be the minority floor leader, an old position for him, in the session which starts January 7.

Along with the supervisory positions, the Democrats control the house patronage for the next two years. They are in agreement, it is reported, on Herbert B. Cohen, of York, former member, for director of the legislative reference bureau, and Thomas J. Callahan, Luzerne, for chief clerk, a post he held before.

Conference to Solve Bootleg Coal Problem

There will be nothing announced, the governor said, "until a definite decision is reached."

When the meeting was arranged, Governor James said he understood not all of the operators have endorsed the plan and that if he approved it, the committee probably would take it back for approval before making the details public.

While the operators' and miners' representatives were discussing the reforestation plan, the U. S. forest service started a survey to determine how many idle anthracite miners could be employed in such a project.

Officials of the Allegheny forest experiment station, conducting the survey, said a reforestation program in the hard coal belt might result in the revival on a small scale of the once flourishing lumber business of the area, especially in mine timbers and wood specialties.

Berlin Claims Fires From Burning City Seen Across Channel

lines and "several enemy aircraft" last night, the Air Ministry announced.

It was believed the number of casualties were not heavy in proportion to the intensity of the raid, property damage was widespread through the London area.

Nine hospitals in all were hit, it was reported this morning.

There were many casualties among the staffs and patients of one of them which received a direct hit. One of the hospitals struck was a large general hospital; another was a hospital for women.

Explosions damaged a Catholic church and an ambulance station. Considerable damage was reported done to dwellings, shops and business buildings.

East of London near the Thames river estuary, a number of persons were feared trapped in an air raid shelter by a bomb-hit nearby.

The attack ended 44 hours of quiet—London's longest respite from bombings since the air siege began.

German planes roared over in waves and singly, dropping flares, incendiary bombs and then high explosives.

The gunfire was so intense that waves of light pulsed across the sky almost continuously. The clouds reflected the glare of shellbursts and bomb-started fires below.

The display of deadly fireworks sometimes counteracted the London background.

Firemen were kept busy all night long, working while the bombs still fell.

A. E. Wall, Associated Press staff member who came to London only a few weeks ago, found his taxicab suddenly ringed by sputtering incendiary bombs.

He and the cabby sprinted for shelter in an archway, watched while five "scorching bombs" smashed down nearby, then returned to their unharmed cab and continued through streets lit like in a giant Fourth of July celebration.

Berlin, Dec. 9.—(AP)—Informed German circles declared today last night's smashing attack on London was the heaviest ever carried out by the German air force since it carried the war to Britain.

The number of planes participating was not disclosed, but these sources said the number could be imagined from the fact that 700 tons of explosives and about 100 tons of incendiary bombs were dropped.

They said the London defenses almost collapsed during the second part of the massed raid on the British capital.

Two British bombers were reported downed last night in the western Reich, where several persons were killed.

Solitary British planes, the High Command communique said, dropped bombs at "numerous places in western Germany during the night. In Duesseldorf, Munich, Gladbach and several other spots residential districts were hit and some houses were severely wounded and 24 slightly injured. No military or industrial damage was done."

Idarwald Reported Captured

(From Page One)
Conflicting reports, however, left in doubt the ultimate fate of the vessel, which sailed from Tampico, Mexico, Nov. 29, en route to Spain.

The Cuban navy said the ship was torpedoed sinking after being torpedoes the crew escaping in small boats.

In Washington, however, the Navy Department said the crew of the Idarwald attempted to scuttle her and set her afire when the cruiser approached, but added that British tars boarded her, put down the flames, hauled down the Swastika flag and ran up their own.

(In London, British official circles declined a comment on the Idarwald incident, but one informed observer said a United States Navy Department report that the German merchantman had been captured "appeared more likely" than the Cuban report that she had been torpedoed.)

The fate of the crew was not known and the Cuban navy department said it had no reports from the south coast to indicate that the men had reached safety. The Cuban molasses tanker Manibi, south of the Isle of Pines, said she was enroute to help, if possible.

The cruiser intercepted the freighter about 75 miles from the south coast port of Cienfuegos between the Isle of Pines and Gran Cayman Island. Officials of the Cuban department of communications radio bureau said. This is well within the American neutrality belt.

Garrett Heir Search Is Revived

She was cross examined by a special deputy attorney general for the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, which is seeking the estate through escheat proceedings.

The hearings will enter their fifth year next January 14, and Special Master William A. Schneider said only 5,000 of the 25,000 claims have been disposed of.

ment program then called for mobilization of a fifth group of National Guard units, composed of eight divisions and 51 regiments or other units, January 3-13. The Sixth and final contingent of nearly 4,000 men was to be ordered into service about February 3.

Original schedules were fulfilled to a great extent by the Guard units already mobilized, although a few units called to active duty last month had to be held at their home stations pending completion of camp facilities.

Harrisburg, Dec. 9.—(AP)—The military affairs department expressed an opinion today the $6,000,000 entrenchment development at Inlandtown Gap would be sufficiently completed by the end of January to house the 28th division, Pennsylvania National Guard, when the troops begin a year's training.

Army orders issued Saturday indicated the 14,000 men of the division would be mobilized at their home armories through the state between January 3 and 19 but would remain there at least 10 days for physical examinations and other army routine before going to the Inlandtown Gap training grounds.

The figure, however, was below those of the three preceding weeks.

Two of those killed by an automobile were hitch-hikers. They were Frank Tremaine, 18, and Theron Cleveland, 17, both of Lawrence township, Tioga county, who were struck down between Lawrence and Tioga.

Frank Boyle, 65, was struck down by a bus in Philadelphia, and an unidentified man was killed by a car in Pottstown.

Four Pedestrians In Weekend Deaths aid to Britain were advanced on Capitol Hill.

This debate—unofficial but spirited—proceeded with one eye on Phillips' next meeting at the treasury.

Senator Adams (D-Colo.) told newsmen that Britain should have at least 60 per cent of American aircraft production, instead of the prevailing 50 per cent.

Senator Nye, (R-ND) retorted that an increased allotment of aircraft to Great Britain "would jeopardize our defense."

Nye, a leader of the group which opposes further British aid, said he anticipated an effort in the new congress to wipe out entirely the existing neutrality act.

HOLD TWO BOYS FOR CAR THEFT AT YOUNGSVILLE

A number of car thefts at Youngsville are believed to have been solved with the arrest of two youths from that section by Private N. B. Johns of the state motor police.

The youths, Sam Messenger, 15, of Youngsville, and Russell Freeman, 14, of Pittsfield, are being held in the detention room at the warden's home, awaiting arrangement. They were arrested Saturday evening in a car owned by Howard Carlson, of Youngsville, which had been stolen a few hours earlier from its parking place on the Main street bridge.

Private Johns alleges that the boys also stole a car belonging to Phillip Halfast, of Levisburg,
Ohio, from a parking place in front of a hotel in Youngsville, November 25. The car was later found abandoned near Pittsfield.

On December 2 an automobile owned by a Youngsville man was stolen from its parking place on Main street and later abandoned near the spot from which it was stolen.

The boys will probably be charged with the theft of an automobile or operating a car without the consent of the owner.
